Mr. Shapiro:

Please take your time. I appreciate the fact that you are actively working on the application and feel much more confident now that I have been in more frequent contact with you.

Please enjoy your weekend and do not rush this process. If it takes a couple weeks to get it in good shape, we'd be much happier to see that, than to have you rush it.

I just returned from a conference and am rushing around like crazy - I know what's like trying to meet deadlines.

Ms. Borden:

We are running a couple of days late with the application for the following reasons.

1 - Our taxes are prepared on a cash basis and we are waiting for accrual basis numbers/confirmation from our accountant. It should be forthcoming shortly.

2 - Our application assumes a significant change in the way we do business as reflected on our websites and catalog. We have run into some operational problems in that area.

I will be working through the weekend on the websites, catalog, and financials.

We recognize how busy you are and that makes it all the more important that our application is well organized and easy to read.

As far as I am concerned, we are one year + tardy.

Back to work.

David Shapiro/
David Silverberg
